

Summer 2022 Exam Questions

Question 1:

Censorship has been a longstanding concern in the Library and Information Science (LIS) profession. In a library or information service setting of your choice, draw on the professional principles and ethical responsibilities to discuss why LIS professionals should lead the effort to address issues related to censorship. Propose at least two approaches to promote free access to information in the setting you have selected.

Question 2:

Describe two strategies information seekers commonly use when seeking information in the digital information environment. Based on the information seeking strategies identified, explain how websites or a library's information organization and retrieval systems can be designed to support information seekers effectively. Discuss two important considerations in the design and implementation process of the information organization and retrieval systems.
